Arabian desert dwellers engaged in traditional game

That's right, golf.

For people who work for us, a round of golf on lush, well-manicured Bermuda grass is an ordinary part of life in Saudi Arabia.

We're Saudi Aramco, a global leader in providing reliable supplies of energy. There are about 2,000 North Americans working with us in Saudi Arabia, and several things about our lives might surprise you.

1. We're doing something important. Saudi Aramco produces more oil than any other company. Badly needed oil. Including about 15 percent of U.S. imports and more than 10 percent of the worldwide demand for oil every day.

2. Our people are glad to be in Saudi Arabia. They came for the professional challenges and rewards that are hard to find elsewhere. And they discovered a quality, family-oriented lifestyle to match.

3. The company's drive to continue serving the world's energy needs gives us the opportunity to work with leading-edge technologies and contribute to world-class mega projects.

4. After 75 years of growth, Saudi Aramco is still expanding. So is the number of great career opportunities we can offer.

5. Playing 18 holes atop 25 percent of the world's oil reserves can be inspirational. But it's still tough for most of us to break par.

What does it take to join an industry leader?
